

MONSIEUR, JANUARY 10, 1871

We are now without any mail for sixteen days. It is too true that it is not as long as we have often been without receiving letters from home, especially during the past two years. The regular packets are now few, and China looks very little better than it did some years ago. I am sure that the mail has been slow to reach here, if that is not also the case in other ports.

The only letters received were one from you, the three mailed by Messrs. A. & J. Jordan, and one from Isaac, via Hunt, with the enclosed letter to Charles & Allen.

The weather is now very calm, and operates very favorably for the sugar crop, moving forward, which was depressing at first on trade generally. A number of vessels are in port awaiting cargo, too. Some destined unusually long. This has had the effect of putting business back in nearly as many branches of trade, more especially so at this period as the season is so far advanced. It is very probable that the crop is in the shape of current sales, as which depends on the crop coming in to meet their engagements.

MAILS—A mail has expected hourly, either by the bark D. C. Murray or clipper ship Oracle.

A small schooner has lately been launched at Pakoo, Molokai. She was built by Mr. E. Rogers, who intends to run her between that place and Lahaina.

The bark Count Bismarck has nearly completed repairs, and will commence loading next week for Bremen. She will take a cargo of oil and domestic produce.

REMOVAL—Messrs. C. A. Williams & Co. have removed their place of business to the brick building on Queen Street which was formerly occupied by C. N. Spencer & Co.

T. S. TANIYU—Those in search of the last edition of that very changeable and evanescent translation—corresponding quarter of 1899; also showing the comparative exports for 1890 and 1870. These tables will be interesting to our readers; not only those interested in the business of the country, but those abroad who may desire to keep posted in its development. We cannot pass over the just commendation of the Customs House officers for the very careful statements of the exports of the kingdom made by them. The beautiful tables were up by the Collector of the Revenue, Mr. J. A. G. de Silva, in direct aid of the Collector General, are alike worthy of praise for fairness of detail and for perfection in the art of calligraphy.

THE WINTER rains, as far, keep up the reputation of the season for mild and storm. January now with us, in a shower which has been kept off till the present time, with slight intermissions of Lees for her, but carefully sitting on the edge of the vessel, lest her balance and feed forward, as vessel was put about immediately, and search made for the missing passenger, but owing to the darkness, those on board were unable to see her. When her cries, although she saw the vessel and made every effort to make herself heard. The vessel again returned to the place where the lady lay, and when the women saw that the only apparent chance to save herself, was to swim to diamond land, which was in sight, although a long distance. After swimming in that direction between two and three hours, being at the time nearly exhausted, she saw another schooner coming up, and was fortunately able to make those on board hear her cries for assistance. A boat was at once lowered from the schooner, which proved to be Mary, and the

We copy the following from the Weer Zeitschrift of October 21st:—

"By simply denying all complicity with the originator of this war, and by thrusting on him the onus of all misfortunes and disgraces which now crush France, once no grudge, the French try to take their present situation as easy as possible, so as to lighten their consciences at least of the self-accusation which the dreadful catastrophes now pending over them must awaken. Thus they come to the extraordinary assertion that the Germans, but more especially the Prussians, committed an act of unheard of barbarity in continuing the war after they had taken the Emperor Napoleon prisoner, and after a certain number of Parisians persons fastening horses near the sidewalk afterward, should have them well secured. A few evenings since, a steer, which had been left standing in front of an establishment on King street, from some cause became frightened and started off at a furious rate, nearly running over several persons.

A NATIVE CHINAMAN belonging to the schooner Nett Merrill, was fined in the Police Court yesterday, in the sum of $100 for an assault on the captain, and $7.50 for being intoxicated, with costs. The affray took place on Monday last, while the vessel was taking in cargo before sailing for Lahaina.

THE police having received information that a party of natives and Chinamen were carrying on gambling operations at a place in the upper part of the city on Sunday last, made a descent upon them, but no proof could be found, the gamblers having got an intimation of their approach.

THE regular meeting of the Fire Department took place last Thursday evening. After the usual business of the association, arrangements were made for celebrating the anniversary of the department, which occurs on the 3d of next month. The various companies are also making preparations in honor of the day.

AN old gentleman of seventy was going to be married to a girl of seventeen. One day a friend surprised him by embracing his intended. "I don't wonder at your astonishment," said the young lady, "but I don't wonder at his." "You don't already suspect that old head has on young shoulders?" The match was broken off.

KALAI has had a share of the prevailing woe rather as well as Oahu. It is feared, however, that instead of proving a benefit it will be the reverse. We learn that some of the fine grazing lands in the neighborhood of Waiwae, were inundated to such an extent, that drains leading to the sea had to be made to clear the land of the water.

AS Ignoramus undertook the other evening to fill a lighted lamp with kerosene. Had he not been interfered with, he might not have had a chance to fill it a second one. It is certainly a wonder that no accident followed the careless handling of this fluid.

NEW PHOTOGRAPHIC GALLERY.—Part of Goodfellow's cream saloon, on King street, is being partitioned off for a photographic establishment for an artist who arrived by the last California steamer. With four galleries in this city there ought to be considerable competition among photographers.

A CHINAMAN, while going along King Street on Saturday, with a hand-cart in front of him, received a sudden elevation, which he failed to appreciate in the same manner as did those who saw it. The cart contained a barrel of something heavy, which rolled to the opposite end, giving the Chinaman a rise in the world that he little expected.

AS enterprising youth about ten years old, availing an opportunity of starting in life, commenced yesterday a business of his own, by selling two tickets from the proprietor of an eating house, without his consent. The Chinaman wanting security for such a heavy transaction had him taken to the Station House. He was finally sent to the Reformation tioner, amended over to the British Consul, who, after investigating the case, sent him to Sydney to be dealt with by the authorities there.

ROYAL HAWAIIAN THEATRE.—Entertainments are given at the Theatre on Monday, Wednesday and Saturday evenings of each week, under the proprietorship of Mr. C. Derby, and management of Mr. J. J. Jones. It may be said that during the past week the efforts of these gentlemen, to cater for the public amusement, have not met with the approval which the character of their entertainments deserve. The delineations of Mr. Jones, and the dancing and singing of Miss Maggie Knight, on the whole full houses every time they appear before the public, and especially for the last time, when the entertainments evening next, when an unusually attractive entertainment will be given. In addition to the local company, Mrs. J. W. Knight will also appear. She has the promise will show their appreciation of the wonderful talents of the little beneficiary by giving her a crowded house.

THE KUKOIA.—The New Year's number of this well-established Hawaiian paper—now in its fourth volume—which appeared last week, took everybody by surprise. Besides a new and tasty heading—entirely new, and in fact, printed in London, and the Hawaiian flag also printed in brilliant red and blue, indicating to strangers, better than any description could, what the Hawaiian ensign is. Accompanying the flag, is Prince William C. Lunalilo's hymn "God Save the King," and a translation of the same in English, made by Rev. L. Lyons, of Hawaii. The judges of Hawaiian say that its composition is one of the most expressive from the native language, and that it is a gem. The paper is printed on such papers as the Kuokoa and Alo Olo, both suitably printed on clear type and white paper, and supplied for two dollars a year, Hawaiians might not to complain of a lack of reading matter and war news. Mr. H. M. Whitney is the publisher of the Kuokoa.

We beg to call attention to the advertisement of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, which may be found in the advertising columns of to-day's issue. This company is one of the most successful and best managed in the United States. There are stockholders, and its immense capital of over $1,000,000 belongs exclusively to the policy holders, and the whole of its profits are annually equitably divided among the assured. The principles upon which Life Insurance is based, and this policy, which is constantly offered of beating all others in execution, are not only beautiful in theory but, in their operation, fulfilled and even surpassed. The predictions and hopes of their most sanguine advocates. If this Company were a recent experiment it should speak less confidently of its merits; but its steady course it has pursued for more than a century, and its record is a magnificent one. It has constantly afforded of beating all others, and has earned for it a reputation for stability which justifies in placing it before our friends and the public as assured success, the greatest ever achieved in life Assurance. Mr. E. P. Adams, the local agent at this place, or Mr. J. R. Helms, who is now here as local agent of the Company, will fully explain the details of the institution to all who wish to post themselves.

of incorporation, will be the pioneers in this partial business."

Oysters require a muddy rather than a sandy or rocky bottom to flourish in, and whenever a shallow bay can be found (that possesses that requisite, they can be cultivated to any extent. We believe that with the proper seedlings any quantity of such oysters may be produced in the lagoon at Pearl River can be produced in any locality, the cultivation of which could also be made profitable. There are already, in certain parts of the lagoon, found a species of native oyster which possesses much of the delicate flavor of the oysters to be found in the great abundance on the Atlantic coast. It only requires a little enterprise, and no great expense to one owning the land along the shores of the lagoon try the experiment with a good prospect of rich returns. We hope, now that it is practicable with quick steam communication between here and the East, that the delicious blivette will find its market, at some one of them will try the experiment.

The Feeling in France.

Mr. EUDORS:—When the natural passions excited the frightful war, now raging on the Continent of Europe, have subsided, after the restoration of Peace on the destructive and deadly antagonism of the Empires, has given place to a generous emulation in the efforts to advance the interests and the progress of the human mind, it will be an interesting study to gather and scan the documents relating to the eventful phases of the Franco-German war.

Napoleon III has just published the military part of a work, that he is preparing in his magnificent edition of Wings of Victory, much to the satisfaction of those who have brought about the capitulation of Sedan, an officer attached to the Head Staff. The postal part will soon appear under the head of: Reflections of France and Germany in the reign of Napoleon III—(By a Senator of the Empire.)

The main arguments of the imperial thesis may be given, even now, a matter of interest; I am there going to expand them, showing as impartially as possible, both sides of the question, so that every one can make such comments as may best suit his usual opinion or favorite tendencies."

And firstly, Napoleon admits that when he commenced hostilities, he knew full well that he had not 300,000 men ready for active service. His sole way to compensate the numeric inferiority of France by a great rapidity of movement, which would enable him to live off the land, and to "drum and cut it off" from the North. The disposition of forces would then have been materially diminished. This he could not accomplish, as, events have proved, his plan of invasion was anticipated by the Prussians. He failed on account of delays which he imputes to the "defects of French military organization, which have been existence for the thirty years."

This statement might naturally be objected to, but we are going to leave it to the reader to judge how wrong for the sake of argument,) that an all powerful military government, such as the Empire has been for eighteen years, has no excuse for not having discovered and done away with those vici-

The Emperor Napoleon may thank Mr. Chaudordy, and at the same time console himself during his captivity at Wilhelmshöhe, with the thought that, if the war of 1870 had taken happy turn for the French arms the breach of peace would have been condoned; and Mr. Chaudordy, who even dares to smooth over the Mexican adventure, would have assuredly found a friendly excuse for a victorious campaign against Germany.

It is a miserable attempt, a sneer at the importance of universal suffrage, when the present republican leaders with as few single citations as the reports of the Prefects, try to show the peaceful intentions of France, whilst they pass over in silence the vote of the legal representatives of the nation, and totally ignore that an immense majority of Frenchmen five months before the beginning of the war, once more mentioned the man who continually has endangered the country in foreign wars. If the nation, by ignoring its own direct and indirect votes, approves of this attempt, it acknowledges its own incompetency.

The breaking out of the war of 1870 surprises France as well as Germany, and it is possible that the French people may not have been in the mood to undertake willingly the exertions and burdens of the war, but the desire for a war against Germany, the craving for the German Rhenish Provinces, has been fostered by the French nation through generations with criminal arrogance, and the Emperor only took advantage of their evil passions, when he undertook this, for him, fatal enterprise. Nowhere is French sentiment more clearly set forth, than in the proclamations of the Republican Government.

France, imperial no more than royal or regular, has ever been willing to concede to us, the right of an independent, vital national development. The events of 1866 have been looked upon with envy by all French politicians, the destruction of Germany has been in the eyes of Frenchmen only an increase of power and authority of Prussia, an attempt against the influence of France.

The moral complicity of France in this war can no more be denied than her formal participation in it, she is as much responsible for it as ever. It was France responsible for the misdeeds of its government.

ANOTHER BURLYMAN.—Information was received at the Police Station on Monday night, that a small clothing store, near Smith's Church, belonging to a Chinaman, had been broken into in the early part of the evening. The thieves—who appear to have been acquainted with the premises, and probably, the Chinaman—made a pile of fifty dollars in cash, besides three pair of cloth pants and a piece of cloth containing about ten yards.

ALL OF US collect a bit of fine writing now and then, and this from a Santa Fe paper, is peculiarly good: "Death, with fearless knuckles, rapped at the door of Mrs. J. N. B.'s soul, and, obedient to the inexorable call, the spirit of that loved woman floated up to its Creator, leaving her husband, children and friends to mourn over the mortal basket." Such an obituary as that robs death of its terrors.

THE ENGINE which is at work discharging the coal from the back Antislaves, gave time in charge of it, to the "Antislave" who was on duty, to go out and see that at the usual time, no "straw" could not be

It is not that some of the people of that country are really wicked, but that they are really excited over the irrepressible Chinaman. It is probable that not more than a score of Chinese were even then that city, and the time is far distant when they will interfere with the labor of the people. The wisdom, therefore, of the Anti-Coolie League, in taking up the subject in time is very evident.

On the various expedients for stopping the influx of Chinese to this country, afford me amusement the inventors, probably, and certainly most of them are amusing to the general public. Away off Philadelphia, where they have not so much as the first wave of this "great flood of Chinese immigration," there is an organization of about two persons known as the Workmen's Anti-Coolie League. This precious League has lately proposed to the Legislature of Pennsylvania, by way of a bill, that all Chinese immigration be forever prohibited. By the terms of the bill it is proposed to treat the "coolie trade" as piracy, engaged in by the vessels as pirates, and to fine agents employed in the the author of this pamphlet meets this argument by accusing the Legislative Assembly of having "treacherously" refused necessary co-operation to the most urgent reforms. "Who does not see that the difficulties and protests which arose from the introduction of the bill for military reorganization?" The members of the opposition were upholding the most mad theories about les exarces—altogether imfetterable—and a hostile feeling prevailed everywhere."

The French Republic has a ready answer for this. It is perhaps fond of reading, he says, but the above was true during the last two years on the garde numbered about forty adherents, that in the previous eleven years, the Assembly used themselves anxious and ready to follow and support the suggestions and measures proposed by the government, and that if the military system could have been improved, it could have been but if found deficient and wanting. The Emperor

MEMORANDA.

SCHROEDER A. P. JORDAN, Friday, 19 days from Humboldt, Cal., with a cargo of redwood lumber in store, arrived at this place on Monday, Jan. 9.

First part of passage had moderate N winds, plenty and better part, fresh E and S winds. Jan. 7 and 8th, had strong gale from N. with very cold seas. Have seen no wrecks on the passage down. Left in port loading for Honolulu, San Francisco, Union Islands, Kinohi, master.

Our readers will be interested in referring back to not considerably firing up—during which steam did not seem to increase—that the flames of the boiler were choked. They were cleaned out and everything worked all right. The engineer had better not get caught in the same fix a second time, as the chances are that things might get scattered.

For the present it meets at Buffum's Hall every Monday evening. The following are the officers: G. Lucas, W. C. D.; A. C. Buffum, P. W.; J. C. H. Rose, V. T.; R. Ryerhoff, W. B. S.; G. Crocker, M. W. The bill contemplates classing as Coolies all who do not come to this land to make a permanent residence here." It will be seen that the commerce of the Pacific Ocean stands a chance of being thrown out of water. It is a lucky thing for the United States that the remarkable man who ran the first Coolie and similar organizations was killed by a Chinese official.

The bill would work with the first principles of political economy."

He wanted to go to Paris, with Marshal McMahon at the head of the troops which were then assembled around him, but this decision met with strong opposition on the part of the government of the Empire. McMahon, who went over to Marshal McMahon to inform him of the results of all the dangers that he had run in that dark movement, it is therefore on the 22nd of December that the Emperor lays the responsibility of the disaster of Sedan—a disaster which was foreseen by McMahon, on account of the part account of the wreck of the English whalerby Capt. John B. Brown, on Ocean Island. The vessel was wrecked July 9, 1857 at midnight. One of the crew only was lost. He jumped overboard in state of intoxication. Capt. Brown remained on the island until the 11th of December, (over five months), when, with his chief mate, he sailed in a small boat for the coast of America, where he was rescued. He was the only survivor of a schooner which had been instrumental in the fragments of the wreck.

The other officers and men who remained on the island several months longer, endured great sufferings, and were finally brought in a vessel sent for that purpose by H. B. Mc. Connell at these islands. The wreck was described by Ocean Island as from a vessel sunked furnished by Capt. Brown at the time :—
The island is in latitude 28° 25' N., long. 128°
00' W. It is a low, sandy island, about 10 miles in circumference. It is composed of broken coral and shells, and is covered near the shore by low bushes. In the center it is covered with sea-birds, and at the top are the ruins of the vessel. The highest part of the island is not more than ten feet above the level of the sea. The only fresh water is what drains through the sand.

Accompanying the account of the wreck of the Whelan is a sheet of the island engraved from a drawing by the late Captain John King and F. Moloney were boys on board the Glendora at the time of the wreck.

SAVAGE married Kasilua, living in the neighborhood of the same place, and was not particularly in regard to domestic affairs, concluded on Saturday last, that the easiest way to end his troubles would be to put an end to himself. Watching the opportunity when no one but himself was in the house, he fastened a rope to a beam in the centre of the room and hanged himself. He meant to make an example of himself, and to show that he would no longer allow anyone to enter the room in time to save him. He was taken down quite senseless, and it took some time before he was brought to again. He was contented to oblige his friends by not trying it again.

FROM CAPT. CRANE, of the Nettle Merrill, we have received some specimens of apple grown on the estate of Captain Makae at Uluapaluku, which for size and flavor are quite equal to any received from the orchards of California or Oregon. Capt. Crane informs us that the orchard at Uluapaluku produced a large number of apples equal in every respect to the samples. The success of Capt. Crane in cultivating this fruit not only shows the result of patience and perseverance, but demonstrates that the high lands of these Islands are capable of producing as fine apples as can be procured from abroad. We trust that others who have lands in favorable localities will emulate his example.

without a license.—Verdict, Guilty. Mr. Stanley for defendant.

Wm. H. Davis vs. Char. Brewer—Ejectment—Non est entered. Mr. Thompson for plaintiff, Mr. Judd defendant.

IN ABEYANCE.—Henry May vs. mch. Sovereign.— This was a bill to recover the value of certain bags flour, tins of crackers and cases of bread, alleged to have been damaged by salt water on account of the sinking of the vessel. The answer admitted that at the goods had been wet, but alleged that the damage was owing to the perils of the sea; the vessel having encountered a gale on the second day after leaving San Francisco. After hearing the evidence, the Court held that this came within the excepted cases of the Bill of Lading, and gave judgment for respondent with cost.

Messrs. Judd and Harris for Plaintiff, Mr. Stanley respondent.

and exercise under the walls of Paris. The serial writer vindicates the capitalization of Sedan by the utter impossibility in what he found himself, either of counselling the flight or of effecting a retreat. Finally, the Emperor ascribes the success of Prussia to the superior number, the indefeasible discipline of her army, and the regard of the Germans for the organized principles of authority. In France, on the contrary, the Assembly opposed measures calculated to increase the material forces of the nation, and in 1815 the policy introduced in the army debased traditions, lack of discipline, want of cohesion, exaggeration in the weight to be carried by soldiers, as well as in the baggage allowed to officers. The looseness of discipline is also accused by Napoleon III to the violent language of 1871, which everywhere spread a bitter spirit of hatred and revenge. The author of the article in the last issue, and who as the counter-argument may impudently and the Republic do not seem to me force enough, I shall not continue them. I have lately become acquainted with some curious facts connected with the mysterious visit of General Garibaldi to the Empress in England, which I will summarize to you at an early date.
